

Are These Facts Regarding Dog Training True Or False?

The socialization period is the most suitable time for bonding between you and your dog. During a puppy's socialization stage, it learns by experience and can easily learn to foster relationships with both humans and its fellow dogs. A puppy learns new behaviors during the socialization stage that helps it learn its master's needs.

The key to raising a healthy obedient puppy is consistency. The more you are consistent and firm with the things you want your dog to learn, the more well behaved it becomes. If you are too flexible during the training sessions for your dog, you may end up confusing it.

Dogs are adept at understanding sign language. Dogs that are particularly trained to guide blind people are trained using audible training modes. The success of each training session with a dog is actually dependent on the dog owner.

You must let your dog know when it has exhibited an undesired behavior by giving it a no reward marker. A no reward marker basically communicates the fact to your dog that there isn't going to be any reward for a particular action.

Shouting at your dog won't do it any good. When you issue out commands in an angry voice, your dog will be hesitant about obeying them because it is unsure about how you will react. To successfully train your dog, don't nag it to death!

Guard dogs are trained to switch on their protective instincts at will. A command from you can put a guard dog on the defensive. In the same vein, one command from you can put a guard dog on relax mode which means it doesn't attack strangers.

Training your dog requires a firm knowledge of dog training skills. You can either obtain dog-training skills from a dog trainer or coach yourself through related literature. Without the right amount of patience you will be unable to communicate your needs to your dog because dog training requires a lot of patience.

Dogs that are large have their own special dog training tools. It is vital that you use the right training tool for the right dog so that things will not go wrong. Ensure that your dog is not being trained under pressure or else you won't get the best out of it.
