

Poems about love a way to prove you really care

It is claimed that love is among the best feelings which you can ever have, it is also one of the lowest feelings when someone falls out of love with you. So what are you able to do to prevent that certain special someone in your life from falling out of love with you. Telling them that you love them regularly certainly works but in my experience there is something more powerful. Poems about love are what I use to show just how much I actually care. It is very easy to say I love you every day but when you place the words in writing it will have greater weight. A short love poem left beneath a pillow or within the pages of a favourite book indicates how caring and thoughtful you really are. You ought to make sure though that the poem that you write is your own personal and never a copy of someone else's work. True love poems come from the heart and nobody else understands how you really feel about that special person in your life. Another way that I have found works is to create a romantic love poem and then mail it. Envisage your loved one opening it in front of one of their friends, how special would that make them feel. Many relationships break up due to a lack of communication, so it really is vitally important that this aspect within the partnership is maintained. Should you be naturally a shy individual and have issues expressing your real feelings openly then this method of communication can often build bridges if you're having problems with an existing relationship. Alternatively sending sweet love poems to a man or woman that you're attracted to could lead to the beginning of a brand new romance. The general consensus is that poems about love are normally written by men for women. In my experience women often bottle up their frustrations until they reach bursting point and then say things they may later regret. My tip for women (this really happened to me and yes I'm a man) Write down what frustrates you about your man in a short love poem and bear in mind to also declare why you love him. Get him to read it on his own and reflect on the contents. If he honestly loves you then he'll understand how you feel and want to try and do what he can to make things better. I do know as it worked for me and our relationship is even stronger as I've stopped doing the small things that really annoyed her. So in conclusion poems about love are definitely a great way to express how you feel and are a great way to help you build a stronger relationship

About the Author

The written word is very powerful and a short love poem will show how much you really care about somebody. A poem alone will not rebuild a broken relationship so you will need to do more to build those bridges. Visit my site at howtowintheback.com for even more advice

Source: <http://www.articlegods.com>